The Female Stranger. A special correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writing from Kansas City, Mo., says: "A short time ago The Sanday Press printed a very pretty story in which it is assumed that the grave of the "Female Stranger" at Alexandria, Va., is the resting place of Theodosia Burr, only daughter of the great Aaron Burr, and wife of Gov. Allison, of South Carolina. Is it?

After his disgrace Aaron Burr went to Europe but returned in 1812 and learned that the only child of his beloved Theodosia was dead. He loved and was beloved by no other person, and but for Theodosia he felt and said that he was "severed from the human race." So he urged Theodosia, who then resided in South Carolina, to come to him in New York, and for the purpose of complying with his request she embarked on a small schooner, which was wrecked. All on board perished, and the accepted theory is that Theodosia Burr found a watery grave in January, 1813. The "Female Stranger" did not die until October, 1816, when she "sighed out her latest breath" in the arms of her "disconsolate hus-

Among the many unique and quaint inscriptions found in the old cemeteries of Alexandria no one of them as boy or man ever so fascinated me as did this: To The Memory Of a

PEMALE STRANGER whose mortal sufferings terminated on the 14th day of October, 1816, aged 23 years and late husband, in whose arms she sighed ont her latest breath, and who, under God, did his utmost to soothe the dull, cold ear of death.

How loved, how valued, once, avails thee not. To whom related or by whom begot; A heap of dust alone remains of thee, "Tis all thou art and all the proud shall be.

"To Him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name whoseever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins."—Acts, 10th bapter, 43d verse,

Many years ago a citizen of A'exandria, in a weird but clever and interesting little book, published under the relieved the mascu ine swelling of the upper lip and made womanly the entire contour of her face. Her hair lay in its raven billiancy as if it had been such features repose wore an air

dria at a time when the seeds of death daily brought her nearer the sleep eternal, and says "the ladies of the hospitable town were kind to her; they never asked her name or that of her family, for, said one of them, 'she is a stranger and sick-two letters of introduction from heaven."

That sounds so like the famous hospitality of Old Virginia that one wishes this narrative were true, and regrets, with a sigh, that it is only a fancy sketch, in which the vivid imagination of the author converts the molehill of fact into the mountain of entertaining

The known facts relating to the "Female Stranger" are but few and simple. At the close of the war I visited a great aunt of mine who was borr, reared and lived at Alexandria, and was a recognized society leader there in the good old days when all the balls and recep-tions of the National Capital were given in that then famous and fashion-able city. She had seen the "strangers" and, perhaps, knew more of them than anyone living. One day, nearly thirty years ago, upon my return from the old cemetery, I took from the lips of this clear headed, venerable lady the following:

this city was the best part of the District of Columbia, a gentleman and lady, supposed to be husband and wife, arrived at Alexandria and took a suite of rooms at the City Hotel, then our principal inn. I remember them well. The gentleman was traveled, scholarly, cultured; seemed possessed of ample fortune, and aside from an occasion-whence they came or why, nor do I remember that any questions were asked, exclusive and aristocratic as our people then were. People were not so meddlesome or so curious as now, and always took her meals in her rooms, which in that day excited no comment bere, yet there was one, and only one thing mysterious in her conduct—on all occasions she was leavily veilor; no citizen of Alexandria ever saw her face.

"After some weeks the lady was taken sick. From the fact that the most eminent physicians of Alexandria and R chmond were called to see her we knew she must be dangerously iii. No one had vouched for her; she was not a native of the Old Dominion, but she was a stranger and she was sick. At that time I was about 28. You will know how to pardon the apparent vanity af an old lady of near four secret, when I tell you that I then occupied a promineat social position, and at my surgestion several ladies of the old families went with me to the hotel, where we tradered our services and officed.

By Vietue of A DEED OF TRUST from Charles H. Zimmerman and wife to the undersigned trustee, dated November, 17th, 1892, and recorded in Deed book No. 28, page 448, one of the land records for the city of Alexandria, Va., and at the request of the party thereby secured, I will seil at public auction, at 12 o'clock m. on SATURDAY, June 3rd, 1893, in front of the Royal street entrance to the Market Building, Alexandria, Va., the following property, towit:

ALT THAT LOT OF GROUND in the city of Alexandria, Va., bounded as follows: Beginning at a point on the north side of King street 123 feet 5 inches west of West street, and running thence east on King street 51 feet, more or less, to the line of the property conveyed by Francis Miller, Commissioner, to Joseph II. Sadduth by a deed dated May 31st, 1896; thence north parallel with West street to the heritage with the request of the undersigned trustee, dated November, 17th, 1892, and recorded in Deed book No. 28, page 448, one of the land records for the city of Alexandria, Va., and at the request of the party from the fact.

ALT THAT LOT OF GROUND in the city of Alexandria, Va., bounded as follows: Beginning at a point on the north side of King the party f iles went with me to the hotel, whore we tendered our services and offered to do all in our power to relieve and comfort her. We were assured both by the husband and attending physicians that nothing could be don , that all she needed was quiet and rest, but was quietly laid at rest out here in the days after her burial, without telling any one where he was going, and was never seen there afterward.

"I think it was in the summer of 1817 that the flat marble slab bearing the strange inscription was put up over her grave in the night time, and if any one here ever knew by whom it was

ers' had been guests, received from some foreign country, just where he never told, a letter containing a draft for a good sum of money with specific instruc-tions as to how a sufficient amount of the money should be expended in erect-ing around the grave a brick wall, surspent in keeping the grave and enclesure in perfect condition. The remit tances then ceased; the gentleman who had so long sent the money was sup-posed to be dead.

And so this piteous and mystic inscription attracts the attention and arouses the sympathetic cur osity of the visitor of the quaint, dreamy, historic old city of Alexandria, and has for three-quarters of a century. Why the mystery thrown about her coming, death and burial; why the enigmatical yet deeply pathetic words employed by the "disconsolate husband," are questions that all these years have not answered, nor is it probable that they will be answered in the years to come.
